Resources of Administration Thrown Into Battle

By LYLE C. WILSON WASHINGTON, March 16. (UP)—Powerful government resources are combatting business recession today in an effort to overcome conditions which imperil treasury revenue and increase the burden of unemployment relief.

The White House and congress are divided in this attack on depression in contrast to the concerted drive under presidential leadership in 1933-34. But one by one various anti-depression devices are being thrown against a standard gauges of business activity show precipitate decline.

President Roosevelt was not greatly impressed by the seriousness of business conditions until a fortnight or more after the regular session of congress convened in January. Notable among the anti-depression remedies are: 1. President Roosevelt's order to departments to expedite purchases of material for the year's needs in an effort to create markets for surplus stocks of materials of all kinds.

2. Mr. Roosevelt's rather cautious agreement to tax revision and new bills on the upgrade of the year's needs in an effort to create markets for surplus stocks of materials of all kinds.

A Column of Editorial Comment on Events That Make Today's Headlines

DOCTOR TOWNSEND and his case involving content of congress have left heavy footprints on the political sands. It may take the government years to rub them out.

Federal investigators attribute the old-age scandals in Oklahoma largely to the popularity of the Townsend movement in that state. The politicians advertised the government's payment as a substitute for the doctor's scheme, and everybody agreed, whether they were eligible or not.

Colorado both parties pledged state contribution of $45 a month to out-maneuver the Townsends, and the legislature subsequently adopted this grandiose idea.

In a few months the funds for the old age kitty will be exhausted. Many other states enacted excessively generous laws for the same reason and are gradually heading toward bankruptcy of their pension funds.

Social security administrators approached the Oklahoma problem with a palpitation which they tried hard to conceal. They feared these preliminary graft revelations might discredit the whole social-aid program.

The board hopes it won't have to stage a repeat performance, although it has discovered the inefficiency in other states, such as North Dakota, Missouri, Arkansas. It expects that these and other commonwealths will clean their houses quietly as a result of the Oklahoma experiment.

But it is willing to wait more shadily in necessary.

BEHAVIOR OF Secretary of State Hull these days suggests that the administration still nurses a faint hope that the solution of current international crises may pave the path to another attempt at world peace and disarmament.

Almost everybody is enunciating foreign policies except the secretary of state. Mr. Hull has not objected to these volunteer diplomacy in the right and left. Mr. Ickes begged the European democracies, especially England, to think twice before lining up with the totalitarian states.

Mr. Hull obviously could not speak so bluntly, though President Roosevelt wanted these sentiments expressed. Otherwise Ickes and Edison would have kept silent. Such speeches by the secretary of state would destroy any beneficial influence he might be able to exert in future negotiations with both democratic and totalitarian states.

Unusual Display of Lightning Flashes Through Skies

After 24 hours with a mixture of weather, including a heavy rain, heavy downpours and a lightning storm—Bremerton today again faced another night of unpredictable weather.

City Commissioner George C. Gort reported that the water in the newly-installed storm sewer on Calloway ave. caused much damage to prevent water damage to homes in that area.

Residents of the Capitol Hill district reported the rain caused some minor landslides, but no severe damage was done. New concrete pits at the site yesterday by WPA and city workmen, had not sufficiently before last night's rain to withstand the downpour, caused said.

About an hour after midnight an unusual lightning storm struck the city, with the accompaniment of thunder. Some of the lightning appeared to be striking higher in the air, resulting from atmospheric conditions.
