Is the 'Golden Door' Closed?

Is the voiden Door' Closed?

Back 50 years or more ago, a colosal statue, gift of the Republic of France, rose at New York's ocean gateway.

The Republic of France is no more, having only recently become the French State. The statue still stands, Liberty, they called her, "Liberty Enlightening the World," with a brave torch raised against darkness.

For that dedication a poem was read. Its words had been inscribed on the monument. They were by Emma Lazarus and the last lines read:

Send these, the homeless toward toward towards the send of the send of

Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me:

arus, and the last lines read:
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me:
"I lift my lamp beside the golden door."
They came freely, for many years, those men and women disillusioned and disheartened with the Old World, to seek new homes and a better life in the New. They were for decades new lobed that freshened and invigorated the life of the growing republic Times changed. The stream was regulated, reduced. Then came evil times even to the New World, and the stream dropped to a trickie.

One of the reasons may be that most of the efforts to bring in refugees have been privately backed by political, social, or racial groups whose interest is presumed by many to be special rather than general. Naturally, the U.S. does, not want immigrants selected by groups and subgroups with special interests in mind 4t wants/mmigrants selected by its own government with national interests only in mid-But only the special groups seem active in the matter, people generally remain midferent active in the matter, people generally remain indifferent active in the matter, people generally remain indifferent active in the matter. ple generally remain indifferent or hostile thinking of un-OFT OF GAS

As long as that condition persists, it is idle to expect that the world can possibly get back to the old ways of trade and commerce. The old-fashioned use of gold in international dealings has been something like this: Country A buyes $10,000,000 worth of goods from Country R: sells it only $9,000,000 worth. Country A must pay the old million (unfavorable balance of trade) in money. The only internationally-accepted money has been gold or cash measured in terms of gold.

That game implies that all tradiances.
