U. S. Women Help Arms Production

Women are playing an increasingly important part in the national rearmament program, because they are not subject to selective service and are highly skilled in certain types of work, such as shown here in the U. S. Army arsenal at Philadelphia. At left, a worker gauges and weighs .50 calibre cast-ridges. The worker at the right is packing a terrific wallop—stamping and loading 77 mm. shells for the artillery.

SENATE PLANS DEBATE LIMIT

Poll Shows War-Aid Bill Will Pass

WASHINGTON, March 3. (UP)—Sen. Carter Glass, Dem., Va., said today that he favored cloture—an iron-clad limitation on debate—to bring the British aid bill to speedy passage.

There was no indication that administration leaders in charge of the bill were considering such a drastic move, although Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky indicated he may seek some arrangement with the opposition to limit debate.

Cloture, a rarely-invoked senatorial device, limits each senator to a speech of not more than one hour's duration before a final vote is taken. It can only be adopted by a two-thirds vote.

"Let them try it," said Sen. Bennett C. Clark, Dem. Mo., an opposition leader. "They haven't offered amendments to require extension of the bill."

Glass commented with the administration poll showing a small margin to defeat the Eisenhower restriction on the government, and to deny extension of the bill.

The poll reportedly showed upwards of 60 votes for the bill on final passage.

PLANS AMENDMENTS

Sen. Robert R. Reynolds, Dem., N. C., preparing another speech against the bill, said that he would offer amendments to require re-authorization of Harry R. Bridges, west coast C. O. leader; to forbid employment of Nazis, Communists and Fascists in the government; and to deny extension of any material aid under the bill to Russia, which he said is an ally of Germany.

Reynolds said that Dies committee reports showed 228 "Communists" working for the federal government. It is essential, he said, that they be removed from the payroll at a time when the nation is seeking to build up its defense.

4,000 A. F. of L. Men Strike At Army Construction Job

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 3. (UP)—Nearly 4,000 workers, members of the Wilmington Building Trades council (A. F. L.) struck today at Camp Davis, the Army's $13,000,000 anti-aircraft firing range under construction on the North Carolina coast.

Most of the strikers were carpenters, but the group included representatives of upwards of 20 crafts affiliated with the council.

Picket lines were thrown up at the 10 entrances to the construction company in charge and all plumbers employed on the project returned to work on the picket lines, although they were not among those called out on strike.

Union leaders said work at the camp was almost completely halted.

Army quartermaster officials, however, said after a later check, that approximately 9,000 men had reported for work this morning, and that construction was proceeding "although not in all phases, of course."

About 18,000 men are employed on construction of the anti-aircraft firing range.

L. H. House, business agent of the council, said a mass meeting of 2,000 workers Sunday night because the construction company in charge refused the council's demands for "at least a partial contract and a par with those of the Wilmington council. He predicted the strike would be won within 24 hours—possibly within "two or three" hours.
