Office Opened To Direct Sale Of Jap Lands

Field offices of the newly-created wartime farm adjustment program are to be set up in Japan to direct the sale of Japanese-owned lands in the United States.

The new program being directed by the farm security administration, is intended to supervise the fair disposition of the land being voluntarily evacuated by Japanese and to aid qualified farmers in taking over the land and obtaining operating credit.

The local office, one of 60 established this week in California, Arizona, Washington and Oregon, is in charge of A. M. Egan, new rural rehabilitation supervisor for the farm security administration. The office is being opened in conjunction with "resettlement" established by the war's wartime civilian control administration to help Japanese and others voluntarily moved from prohibited military zones.

His job is to contact Japanese farmers who propose to evacuate their farm land voluntarily, see that they get a fair disposition of their land or farming operations, and see that the land is put to full production of vital war crops," Egan said.

"Japanese take vital assistance in disposing of their land before voluntarily evacuating are urged to get in touch with me. Farmers who are able to grow the kind of crop already on the land, or who are willing to plant crops needed for war purposes, are also urged to come in. Our office wants to bring these two together."
