

O'Hare, Naval Air Hero, Tells How He Shot Down 5 Japs

By FRANK TREMANN
PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii, March 26.—(UP)—A flying naval hero who is one of America's outstanding heroes of the new war received the press today to describe, in his own words, an exploit with five parallels in aerial warfare.

It is Lieut. Edward S. O'Hare, No. 20 somewhere in the southwest Pacific while flying a carrier-based fighter plane, took on nine Japanese bombers single-handed, shot down five of them and damaged another.

The exploit had been described in detail by correspondents who accompanied the naval task force of which the carrier was a part, but it never had the validity it has today when the author told about it as though it were nothing. His superior officers took occasion to praise his work and to suggest he had saved the force from serious damage.

All the fighters on the carrier were busy Feb. 20. In the morning they shot down two four-motor Japanese patrol bombers, and in the afternoon destroyed eight each of two waves of nine two-engine bombers which tried to attack the naval force. This made a total of 18 planes definitely destroyed of a possible 20, and one of the two survivors was seen to be badly damaged so that it was doubtful it ever reached its base.

O'Hare explained he hadn't been able to get into action that day until the afternoon. He had been held on the carrier in reserve. After his comrades had ridged the first wave of nine bombers and several were pursuing the one survivor toward the horizon, O'Hare and his partner were landing on the carrier; they were almost out of gas.

Fifteen minutes later the second wave of nine Japanese planes appeared. By then O'Hare and his partner were flying the only American plane left in the air. O'Hare's partner's guns jammed and he was forced out of action, leaving O'Hare to face the nine Japanese planes.

"They were flying in a 'V' of 'Vs' then, about 15 miles from the carrier and at about 11,000 feet," O'Hare said in a first voice, as though he was making a verbal report to a superior. "I realized that it was up to me to repulse them. There wasn't much else to do but go in shooting."

On his first pass at them, two from the after end of the right side of the 'V' dropped out. Then I moved over and made up the left side of the 'V'. That I shot one and after the next—then I had to pull out fast to keep from letting the other Japs bring their guns to bear.

"I repeated the process five times. Each time I started firing about 100 yards from the objective. The last time I got out with only about a round of ammunition left and with my gun jammed."

O'Hare added this last, apparently, by way of explaining how the damaged Japanese plane had managed to get away. "The whole action, he believed, required only four or five minutes.

Light-colored clothing is more comfortable because it reflects the heat which dark clothes absorb.

Wardens to Inspect All Residences

Sixteen hundred wardens are expected over a state-wide radio hookup, which outlined the plans for Home Protection Week.

After the radio program, Chief Sullivan outlined the work to be done by the air raid wardens and explained half of the instruction posters which will be placed in every home, and Chief of Civilian Protection, J. L. Snow was called upon to explain the other half of the poster. Sgt. Christ Tillot of the city police department was introduced, as was Capt. Tillot of the fire department; they are two of the regular officers assigned to help conduct this campaign.

Defense Council Members James Russell and G. S. Callahan promised their assistance to the council offer. Chief Hubbard closed the program with remarks regarding the "I Am Prepared" certificate which is to be issued to every citizen.

Minimum requirements necessary to take care of incendiary bombs, which are listed on the poster, are: 1. A fire extinguisher, 2. A fire escape, 3. A fire alarm, 4. A fire bucket, 5. A fire hose, 6. A fire blanket, 7. A fire alarm, 8. A fire bucket, 9. A fire hose, 10. A fire blanket, 11. A fire alarm, 12. A fire bucket, 13. A fire hose, 14. A fire blanket, 15. A fire alarm, 16.
