

Women's Reserve For Navy Okeed By House Group

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(UP)—The house naval affairs committee yesterday approved legislation to create a women's auxiliary reserve for the navy, an organization similar to the women's army auxiliary corps already authorized by the house.

Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of the bureau of navigation, told the committee that the legislation would release men from non-combatant service to more vital duty on the frigate line.

The bill would permit the enlistment and commanding of members of the women's auxiliary reserve without limitation as to rank, but Jacobs said it was the intention of the navy department to grant no commissions higher than the rank of lieutenant commander.

A similar naval women's corps was organized in the world war and the members were known as yeomanettes.

U. S. Has In Custody 8,010 Enemy Aliens

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(UP)—The justice department announced today that it took 8,010 enemy aliens into custody last week, bringing the total apprehended to 8,418 as of April 14.

Those arrested last week included 46 Japanese, 133 Germans and 38 Italians. The department now has apprehended a total of 4,443 Japanese, 2,460 Germans and 1,127 Italians.

A very serious shortage of surgical gauze, bandages and other medical essentials is threatened by a present wave of house hoarding. The department is urging consumers to stock up unobtrusively on materials which are of such vital importance to our fighting men.

Mrs. America watch the price tags! Already cutting prices have been set on a number of household articles such as radios, phonographs, cooking and heating stoves, washing and ironing machines and vacuum cleaners—and many more are coming. Government regulations say that a tag must appear on each article clearly stating the maximum price which may be charged. This order is specifically for consumer protection against unfair prices—so be an intelligent shopper and look for the government tags.

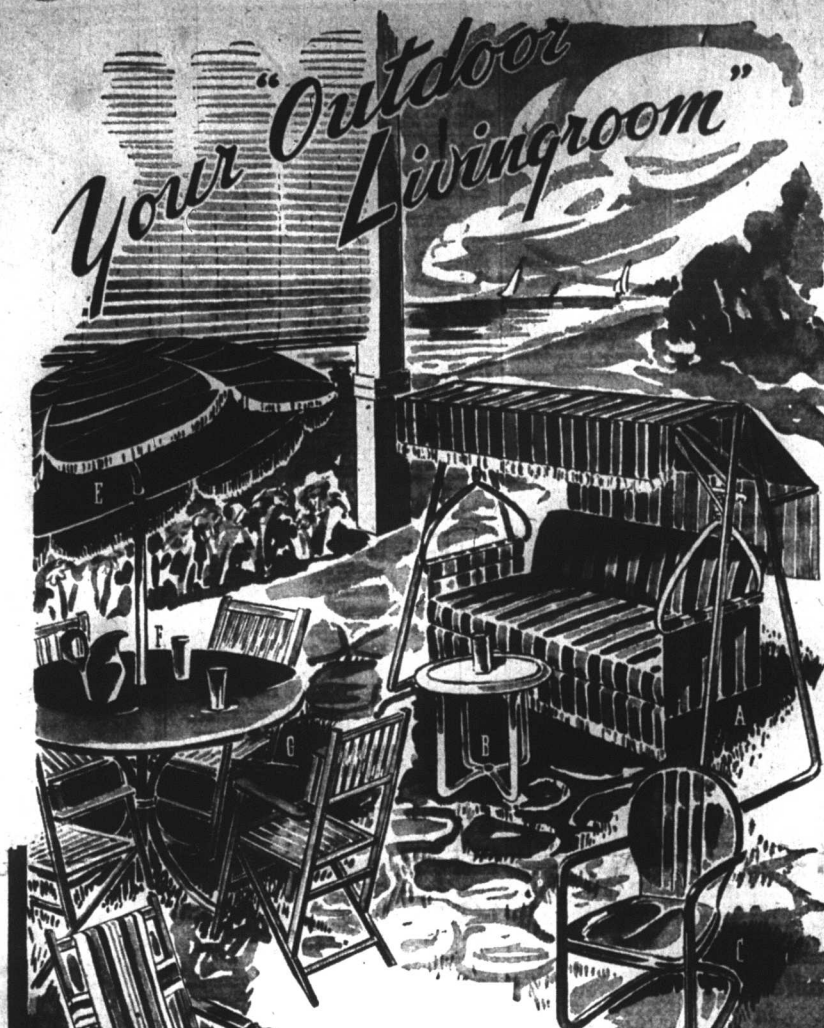

After June 30 a long list of metals, cloth, plastics, colors, oils and chemicals may not be used for toys, games or Christmas ornaments. So start looking forward to games made entirely of wood and cardboard, and Christmas tree ornaments made of paper and spun glass (no more dangling tinsel or cellophane). Already one manufacturer has perfected a toy cycle made almost entirely of wood, and similar substitutions are being made in boys' costume wagons. Unfortunately for big as well as little boys, however, electric trains are out for the duration.

Perhaps unintentionally you have been hoarding first aid materials. It is true that the government has asked every household to be prepared with an adequately stocked first-aid cabinet—but this does not mean you should set up a

Maybe it's a good thing that you won't be able to get chloride bleach as usual for your laundry. According to the consumer division it is only recently that housewives have used bleach regularly. And often, in an effort to get clothes snowy white, the use of chlorine had damaged fabrics. Bleaching has never been a good substitute for washing, and clothes will last much longer if you depend on good washing and the use of chlorine had damaged fabrics. Even familiar medicines are changing with the war. Both supply and distribution of quinine, so important as an anti-malarial agent, has now been put under government control. Although quinine will probably disappear from many common medicines, it will be saved for military use and treatments in which it is indispensable. Ninety-five per cent of the country's supply of cinchona bark, the source of quinine, came from Java and the Dutch East Indies. South America is the next best source, and growing there is being spread as quickly as possible.

Trestle Wrecked by Arsonists

Trestle, one of four destroyed when set afire by saboteurs or arsonists on Southern Pacific right-of-way near El Centro, Calif. is being repaired. Branch line soon will be used to transport sugar beets, now vital war commodity.

Mrs. America Meets the War; Tinned Soup, Heating Pads Hit

(Editor's note: War touches every home and every citizen. This column, based on official government information and prepared by the Office for Emergency Management reveals how the war will affect Mrs. America and her home.)

The long-awaited order restricting women's styles is here at last and proves to be very mild. Mrs. America won't look very different, after all. A little less fullness in her skirts, a little less length in her jackets, no French cuffs on her sleeves. It's doubtful whether men will notice the difference at all—except that lines will be slightly more figure-revealing.

You're going to miss certain of your favorite canned soups. A new tin order prohibits tin for canning all except certain specified varieties. The range is still wide, but if your favorite was black bean or cream of mushroom, you won't find it on the list. Fish chowders, chicken, and a wide variety of vegetable soups will still be available, although many cans may be larger than usual. Also, a greater amount of tin is being allowed for packaging soups which require the addition of water, rather than those which come "ready to serve."
